
West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area Layoff Aversion Strategy

June 2010

Mangum Economic Consulting, LLC is a Richmond, Virginia based firm that specializes in producing objective economic, quantitative, and qualitative analysis in support of strategic decision making. Examples of typical studies include:

Policy Analysis – Identify the intended and, more importantly, unintended consequences of proposed legislation and other policy initiatives.

Economic Impact Assessments and Return on Investment Analyses – Measure the economic contribution that business, education, or other enterprises make to their localities.

Workforce Information – Project the demand for, and supply of, qualified workers.

Cluster Analysis – Use occupation and industry clusters to illuminate regional workforce and industry strengths and identify connections between the two.

Environmental Scanning – Assess the economic, demographic, and other factors likely to affect your enterprise in the future.

Dr. Mangum earned his Ph.D. in economics at George Mason University in 1995, where he was fortunate enough to receive his training under Nobel Laureate James Buchanan and the team of colleagues Dr. Buchanan had recruited to the Center for Study of Public Choice. He has nearly two decades of experience in quantitative analysis and policy development at the federal and state level.

Executive Summary

In recent years, the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area has been hard hit by industry closures and layoffs.¹ Already in fiscal year 2009-10, major layoffs have impacted 622 industry jobs within the region, and these job losses come on the heels of major layoffs affecting 811 jobs in fiscal year 2008-09, and 291 jobs in fiscal year 2007-08. This report presents an analysis that supports a two-part strategy to aid in the aversion of future layoffs within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area.

The first part of that strategy involves identifying industry clusters within the region that are at significant risk for future layoffs. To accomplish that task, we used recent economic data to assess the performance of nine key regional industry clusters that were previously identified in 2009 as part of a U.S. Department of Labor Regional Innovation Grant. Our analysis showed that five of those nine previously identified clusters – Chemicals and Materials, Fabricated Metals and Equipment, General Manufacturing, Textiles, and Wood Products – are at significant risk for future layoffs.

The second part of the strategy consists of developing a resource map that identifies the specific occupations associated with those industry clusters, the education and training programs that support those occupations, and the education providers within the region that offer those programs. By illuminating existing training programs within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area that directly support the identified at risk industry clusters, this resource map provides a tool that the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board can use to more effectively target scarce incumbent worker training resources, thereby aiding in the aversion of future layoffs.

This report was produced by Mangum Economic Consulting, LLC at the request of the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board.

I. Introduction

In recent years the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area has been hard hit by industry closures and layoffs.² So far in fiscal year 2009-10, Gildan Inc., an apparel manufacturer, has announced it will be closing with a loss of 92 local jobs, and Stanley Furniture Company, a furniture manufacturer, has announced a permanent reduction of 530 local jobs. This loss of 622 industry jobs comes on the heels of major layoffs affecting 811 jobs in fiscal year 2008-09, and 291 jobs in fiscal year 2007-08.

This report presents an analysis that supports a two-part strategy to aid in the aversion of future layoffs within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area. The first part of that strategy involves identifying industry clusters within the region that are at significant risk for future layoffs. The second part consists of developing a resource map that identifies the specific occupations associated with those industry clusters, the education and training programs that support those occupations, and the education providers within the region that offer those programs. In combination, these two analytical steps provide a tool that the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board can use to more effectively target scarce incumbent worker training resources, thereby better aiding at risk industries in bolstering their economic competitiveness and avoiding future layoffs.

The remainder of this report is divided into four sections. In the Recent Economic Trends section, we briefly describe recent economic trends within the West Piedmont Workforce Area. This information is intended to provide a context for the analysis that follows. In the Cluster Analysis section, we identify at risk industry clusters within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area and describe the method that was used to perform that identification. In the Workforce Training section, we then map the occupations employed within those at risk industry clusters into their requisite education and training programs, and then identify the education providers within the region that offer those programs. Finally in the Conclusion section, we summarize the findings from the previous analyses and describe how those findings can be used in the context of a layoff aversion strategy.

This report was produced by Mangum Economic Consulting, LLC at the request of the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board.

II. Recent Economic Trends

As with the state as a whole, total employment in the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area began to decline in the last half of 2008 and then fell sharply through most of 2009, before rebounding slightly in the fourth quarter of the year. Job losses within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area tended to be more severe than at the statewide level however. Figure 1 depicts total employment within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area between 2007:Q1 and 2009:Q4 (the most recent quarter for which data are available). As this graph shows, between the 2008:Q4 and 2009:Q3, total employment within the region fell from 71,786 to 66,610, for a loss of 5,176 jobs or 7.2 percent. By way of comparison, total job losses for the state as a whole over this period were 3.7 percent.

Figure 2 provides similar data for the regional and statewide unemployment rate between January 2007 and April 2010 (the most recent month for which data are available). As these data show, the unemployment rate within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area rose sharply in the later part of 2008, increasing from 7.4 percent in August of 2008 to 13.0 percent in January of 2009. It is also important to note that over this period the gap between the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area's unemployment rate and the statewide rate doubled, rising from approximately 3 percent to 6 percent.

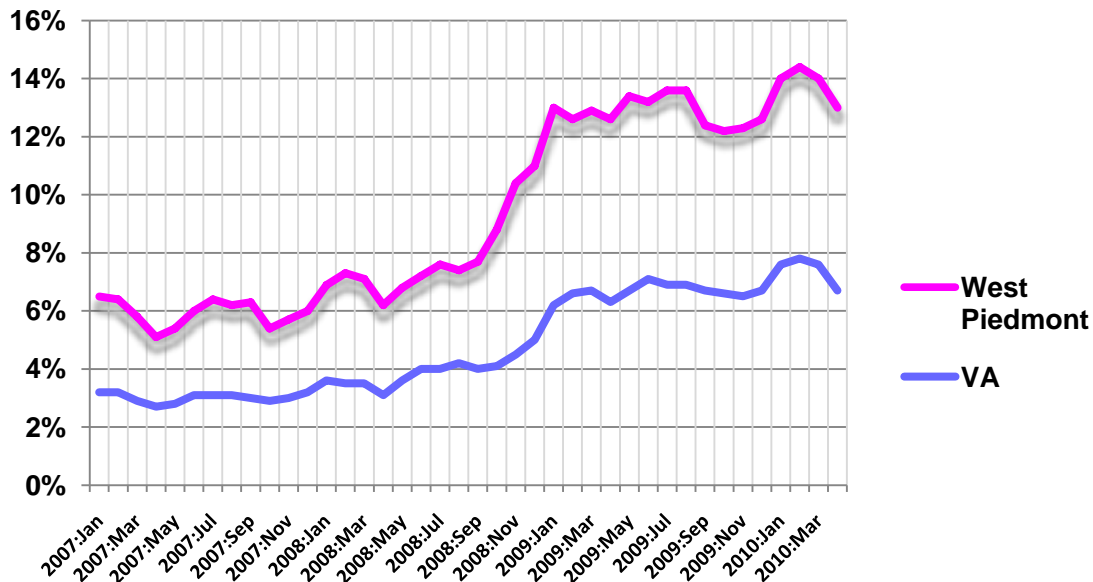

Figure 2: West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area and Statewide Unemployment Rate – January 2007 to April 2010⁴

In combination, what these data show is that, even though the 2008-09 recession had a significant negative impact on Virginia as a whole, its impact on the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area was even more severe.

III. Cluster Analysis

In this section, we identify at risk industry clusters within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area and describe the method that was used to perform that identification. This analysis relies heavily on previous work that was done for the STREAMLINE bi-state leadership group in 2009 as part of a U.S. Department of Labor Regional Innovation Grant.

⁴ Data Source: Virginia Employment Commission.

Identification of Regional Industry Clusters

In early 2009, our firm supported the STREAMLINE bi-state leadership group's regional efforts, by, among other things, developing an industry cluster analysis for the greater West Piedmont area. Although the term "cluster" is often used somewhat loosely to refer to a group of businesses or other entities that are in close geographic proximity or share some other common characteristic, the term "cluster analysis" has a much more precise meaning. It refers to a statistical technique that uses commonalities between industries' customer and supplier networks – who they sell to and who they buy from – to group them into clusters of economically related industries. By grouping industries on the basis of these relationships, we are able to identify groups of industries that benefit from being located in close proximity to one another, quantify the depth and breadth of their economic connection to the region, and identify those industry clusters that serve as regional economic drivers.

Method

To perform our industry cluster analysis, we employed 2007 data from IMPLAN, a commonly used regional economic simulation model.⁵ Consistent with a method pioneered by Feser and Bergman,⁶ industries were first assessed on the basis of four separate characteristics: 1) the relationship between their individual supplier networks, 2) the relationship between their supplier and customer networks, 3) the relationship between their customer networks, and 4) the relationship between their customer and supplier networks. These four groups of correlations were then compiled into a single "linkage matrix." We then applied Ward's hierarchical cluster method to that linkage matrix to derive clusters of core industries for the region.

In the second stage of the analysis, we assessed the relative economic significance of each cluster, using a set of performance indicators that were first employed by Hill and Brennan.⁷ That set of indicators is comprised of eleven measures:

1. Employment Location Quotient (LQ Employment): Measures the degree to which a region has an employment concentration within a specific industry relative to the national norm (2007 data).

⁵ Data Source: Minnesota IMPLAN Group, Inc.

⁶ Edward J. Feser and Edward M. Berman, "National Industry Cluster Templates: A Framework for Applied Regional Cluster Analysis," Regional Studies, 2000, vol.34, no.1, pp.1-19.

⁷ Edward W. Hill and John F. Brennan, "A Methodology for Identifying the Drivers of Industrial Clusters: The Foundation of Regional Competitive Advantage," Economic Development Quarterly, February 2000, vol.14, no.1, pp.65-96.

2. Establishment Location Quotient (LQ Establishments): Measures the degree to which a region concentrates within a specific industry based on number of local establishments relative to the national norm (2007 data).
3. Relative Earnings Ratio (REratio): Measures average industry pay within the region relative to average industry pay within the nation (2007 data).
4. Growth in Industry Pay Relative to Region Pay (RREratio): Measures growth in industry pay between 2001 and 2007 relative to growth in region pay between 2001 and 2007.
5. Change in Importance of Industry (ΔLI): Measures change in the proportion of regional employment accounted for by the industry between 2001 and 2007.
6. Sales Ratio: Measures industry sales as a proportion of regional sales (2007 data).
7. Purchase Ratio: Measures industry purchases as a proportion of regional purchases (2007 data).
8. Type 1 Multiplier Ratio: Measure the industry's Type 1 Multiplier relative to the regional average. Type 1 Multipliers measure the economic ripple, or Keynesian multiplier, effects that an industry has on the regional economy (2007 data).
9. Proportion of Industry Output Exported: Measures the proportion of an industry's output that is exported out of the region (2007 data).
10. Industry Exports as a Proportion of Regional Exports: Measures the industry's exports as a proportion of total regional exports (2007 data).
11. Employment Growth Ratio: The industry's nationally projected annual employment growth between 2006 and 2016

Results

Using this method, we identified eleven existing industry clusters within the greater West Piedmont area. Nine of these clusters – Chemicals and Materials, Construction, Fabricated Metals and Equipment, Finance, General Manufacturing, Healthcare, Textiles, Transportation, and Wood Products – were shown by the performance indicators to be of particular economic importance to the region. Full detail on the core industries that are included in each of these clusters, along with their top supplier and customers, and top twenty occupations in terms of employment, are provided in Appendix 1 of this report.

Evaluation of Currently “At Risk” Clusters

Building on this earlier analysis, we have used more recent data from the critical 2007 to 2009 period to re-evaluate the economic performance of the nine previously specified industry clusters. The purpose of this analysis is to identify those clusters that are currently most at risk for future layoffs.

Overall between 2007 and 2009, employment within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area declined by 8.6 percent. Table 1 ranks the change in employment over this period for each of the previously specified clusters. As these data show, the Textiles cluster suffered the largest loss in employment, falling from 1,672 to 262 jobs, for a decline of 84.3 percent. The Wood Products cluster suffered the second largest decline in employment (34.9 percent), followed by General Manufacturing (27.6 percent), Fabricated Metals and Equipment (20.9 percent), and Construction (13.2 percent). At the other end of the spectrum, employment within the Healthcare cluster increased by 4.8 percent between 2007 and 2009.

Table 1: Change in Industry Cluster Employment – West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area – 2007 to 2009⁸

Table 2 provides a similar ranking for the change in average weekly wages between 2007 and 2009. Overall over this period, nominal wages in the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area increased by 2.7 percent. Of the nine identified industry clusters, wage performance within the Textiles cluster was the worst, with average weekly wages falling by 4.6 percent between 2007 and 2009. The Transportation and Wood Products clusters also experienced declines in weekly wages (2.4 and 1.0 percent respectively). Wage increases in the Chemicals and Materials, and Fabricated Metals and Equipment clusters, although positive, were below the regional average. While wage increases in the General Manufacturing (8.0 percent), Construction (5.0 percent), Healthcare (3.3 percent), and Finance (2.9 percent) clusters all exceeded the regional average.

Table 2: Change in Industry Cluster Average Weekly Wage – West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area – 2007 to 2009⁹

Cluster Name	Average Weekly Wage 2007	Average Weekly Wage 2009	% Change
Textiles	$579	$552	-4.6%
Transportation	$589	$575	-2.4%
Wood Products	$594	$588	-1.0%
Chemicals and Materials	$869	$879	1.2%
Fabricated Metals and Equipment	$653	$664	1.7%

Healthcare	$616	$636	3.3%
Construction	$547	$574	5.0%
General Manufacturing	$628	$678	8.0%

Table 3 provides a look at changes in another measure of cluster performance – cluster employment as a share of total regional employment. As this table indicates, the General Manufacturing and Textiles clusters posted the largest declines in employment share, with General Manufacturing dropping from 9.0 to 7.1 percent of total regional employment, and Textiles falling from 2.2 to 0.4 percent. Again at the other end of the spectrum, the Healthcare cluster’s share of total regional employment increased from 11.8 to 13.5 percent.

Table 4 updates the location quotients for each of the specified industry clusters. Location quotients measure an industry’s “footprint” within a region relative to some benchmark, in this case the industry’s footprint in the state. If the location quotient is above one, the industry has a larger presence in the region than one would expect based on the statewide norm. If the location quotient is below one, the reverse is true. As the data depicted in Table 4 demonstrate, the regional footprint of the Textiles, General Manufacturing, and Wood Products clusters all declined between 2007 and 2009, with the Textiles cluster posting the largest drop (10.0 to 2.1). In contrast, the relative size of the Construction, and Chemicals and Materials clusters actually increased between 2007 and 2009.

Finally, Table 5 looks at recent data on unemployment claimants by industry and maps those data into the nine identified industry clusters. What these data show is that, collectively, these nine clusters accounted for approximately 62 percent of all unemployment claimants in May 2010 (the most recent month for which data are available), with the General Manufacturing cluster comprising the largest proportion of that number (25.4 percent).

Based on the data presented in Tables 1 through 5, we conclude that five of the nine industry clusters identified in the STREAMLINE bi-state leadership group's 2009 Regional Innovation Grant are significantly at risk for future layoffs. Those five at risk clusters are:

- Chemicals and Materials,
- Fabricated Metals and Equipment,
- General Manufacturing,
- Textiles, and
- Wood Products

IV. Workforce Training

In this section, we identify the occupations employed within the at risk Chemicals and Materials, Fabricated Metals and Equipment, General Manufacturing, Textiles, and Wood Products clusters, map those occupations into their associated training programs, and then identify the education providers within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area that offer those programs. The method used to accomplish this task is not new and has been successfully employed in earlier studies.¹³ The purpose of this analysis is to aid the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board in more efficiently targeting scarce incumbent worker training resources, thereby enhancing the economic competitiveness of these at risk industries and decreasing the threat of future layoffs.

Our analysis involves a three step process. In the first step, we use a Virginia-specific staffing matrix developed by the Virginia Employment Commission to identify the specific occupations employed in the individual industries that comprise each of the five at risk clusters. In the next step, we use a crosswalk developed by the National Crosswalk Service Center (NCSC) to map those identified occupations into their associated education and training programs.¹⁴

¹³ Similar methods are used in at least seven states (California, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, New Jersey, Utah, and Virginia) to project anticipated education and training demands. For an excellent exposition of this method see, William J. Drummond and Jan L Youtie, "Occupational Employment, Demand for College Graduates, and Migration: A Statewide View," a report to the Board of Regents, University System of Georgia, 1999. For an example of how this method has been used previously in Virginia see, A. Fletcher Mangum, "System-Wide Needs Assessment for Virginia Education," State Council of Higher Education for Virginia, March 28, 2002, p.90.

¹⁴ The National Crosswalk Service Center (NCSC) is funded by the U.S. Department of Labor, Employment and Training Administration. The specific NCSC crosswalk used in this analysis is the 2000 Standard Occupational Classification Crosswalk to 2000 Classification of Instructional Programs. This crosswalk identifies the prerequisite instructional programs (classified according to the National Center for

Through the combination of these first two steps, we are able to create a crosswalk that identifies the occupations associated with each cluster, and the education and training programs associated with those occupations. Full detail on that crosswalk is provided in Appendix 2 of this report.

In the third step of the analysis, we use data from the U. S. Department of Education's Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS). These data are comprised of all graduates in academic year 2008-09 from degree-granting public or private, four-year or two-year, colleges and universities within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area. By comparing the list of requisite training programs developed in step two, with the list of graduates by program generated in step three, we are able to identify those education providers within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area that offer training programs that are directly linked to the five identified at risk industry clusters.

The results of that analysis are provided in Table 6. As these data indicate, there are three postsecondary education institutions within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area – Averett University, Danville Community College, and Patrick Henry Community College – that provide training programs that are linked to occupations within the five identified at risk industry clusters.¹⁵

Educational Statistics' 2000 Classification of Instructional Program, or CIP, code) necessary for employment in 1,364 specific occupations (classified according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' 2000 Standard Occupational Classification, or SOC, code). Often, these are many-to-many relationships where a given instructional program can serve as an avenue into one of many jobs, or one of several instructional programs can serve as a prerequisite for a given job.

¹⁵ It is important to realize that the data provided in Table 6 are subject to the limitations of the IPEDS database. From a practical perspective this means that some institutions that offer programs within the West Piedmont Workforce Area (most notably, Averett Non-Traditional and National College) cannot be included in the analysis because data for all their campus locations throughout the state are reported in IPEDS as a single entity. As a result, it is not possible to determine which of their programs are specifically offered in the West Piedmont Workforce Area, as opposed to elsewhere in Virginia.

V. Conclusion

In recent years, the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area has been hard hit by industry closures and layoffs.¹⁶ Already in fiscal year 2009-10, major layoffs have impacted 622 industry jobs within the region, and these job losses come on the heels of major layoffs affecting 811 jobs in fiscal year 2008-09, and 291 jobs in fiscal year 2007-08.

This report has presented an analysis that supports a two-part strategy to aid in the aversion of future layoffs within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area. The first part of that strategy involves identifying industry clusters within the region that are at significant risk for future layoffs. To accomplish that task, we used recent economic data to assess the performance of nine key regional industry clusters that were previously identified in 2009 as part of a U.S. Department of Labor Regional Innovation Grant. Our analysis showed that five of those nine previously identified clusters – Chemicals and Materials, Fabricated Metals and Equipment, General Manufacturing, Textiles, and Wood Products – are at significant risk for future layoffs.

The second part of the strategy consists of developing a resource map that identifies the specific occupations associated with those industry clusters, the education and training programs that support those occupations, and the education providers within the region that offer those programs. By illuminating existing training programs within the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Area that directly support the identified at risk industry clusters, this resource map provides a tool that the West Piedmont Workforce Investment Board can use to more effectively target scarce incumbent worker training resources, thereby aiding in the aversion of future layoffs.

Appendix 1: Cluster Detail

In the tables that follow, we provide detail on the specific industries that comprise each of the affected clusters, along with information on their supplier and customer networks, and estimated occupational employment.
